

Write Your Own Comic Strip

Fancy producing a Wimpy Kid story of your own? Use these boxes and our top tips to give it a go!

- 1 Think of an idea. Try to come up with a short adventure for Greg or his friends – either at school or at home. What can you imagine them doing next?
- 2 Plan a story. You've got four boxes, so work out what's going to happen in each one. Sketch a rough draft first. Strips should have a proper start, where you introduce characters; and an end – the punchline.
- 3 Keep the drawings simple. The Wimpy Kid books have straightforward line drawings – look at the books to see how to draw people's features.
- 4 Use speech bubbles. These are a simple but effective way to tell people what's going on in your stories.
- 5 Show it to your friends. Finding out what people do and don't like about your comic strip will help you to improve.

Wimpify You and Your Friends

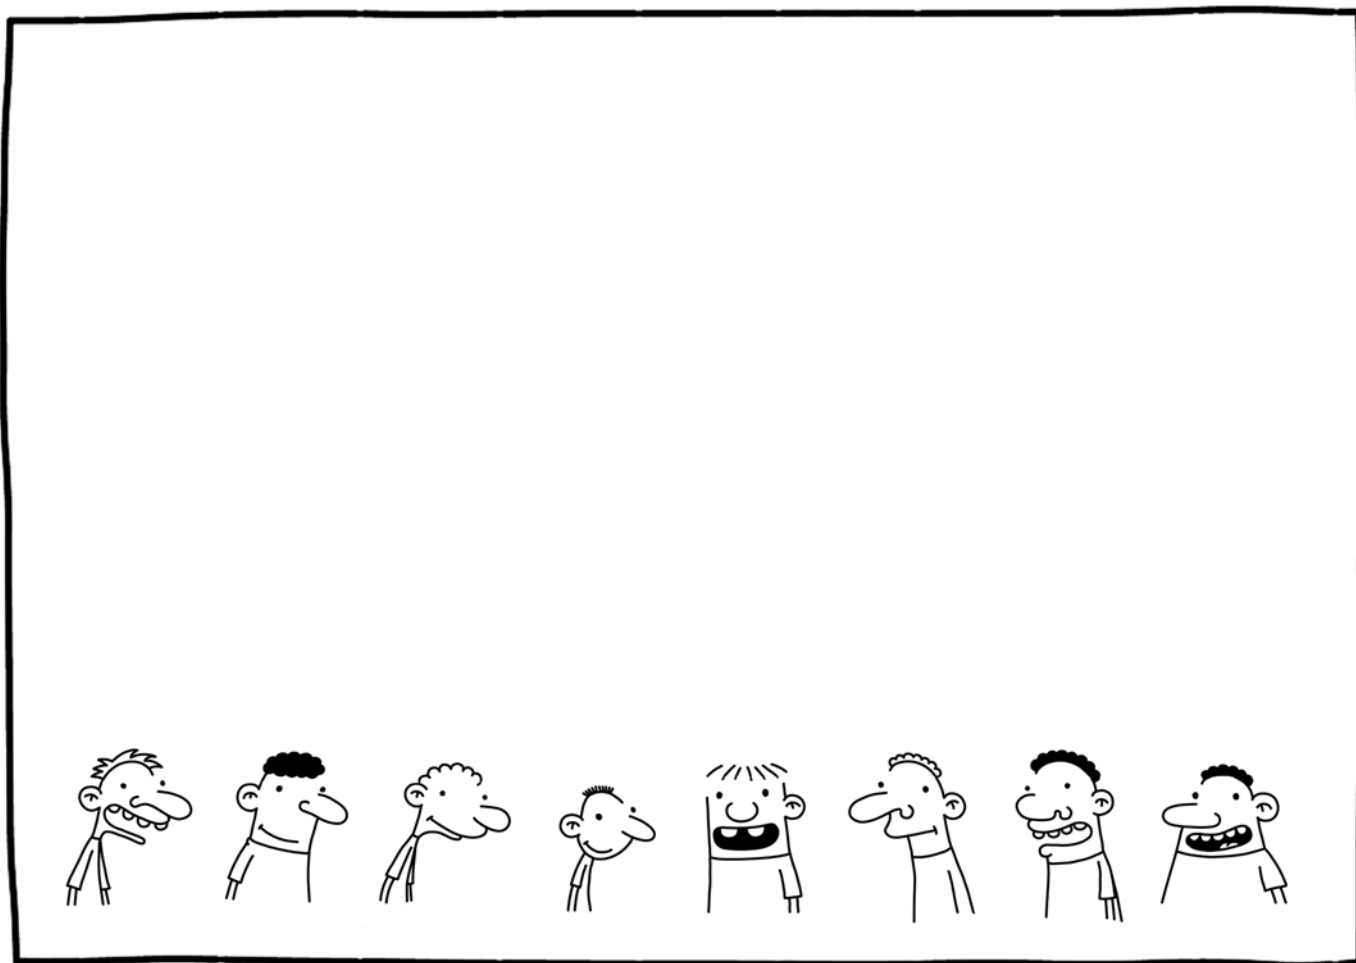

Make you and your friends part of the Wimpy fun by sketching your own characters!

Start by practicing drawing like Jeff Kinney. You could use tracing paper to draw over one of the sketches and get used to the lines and style of the characters. Or put some paper alongside a book and try to copy a drawing as closely as possible. Look at what makes the Wimpy Kid drawings great: simple, clean lines, big heads, thin arms and legs and mouth expressions that show you how a character is feeling.

Now try drawing yourself or your friends! Set yourself up facing a mirror, or get a photo to base your sketch on. Think about the features that you want to highlight. You could try giving yourself a perfectly round head like Greg's, and adding in simple features from there, exaggerating any that you like. So if you've got short hair, just draw a few strands like Greg's, and if you're often smiling, add in a big happy mouth.

Make a Wimpy Kid Bookmark

Bookmarks are great for helping to keep your place in the latest Wimpy Kid adventure – and they make nice presents for other book fans too! Follow our ten easy steps to learn how to make your own.

- 1 Cut out the bookmark. Then glue it on to stiff card and cut round the edges. Don't worry if you don't have any card to hand – paper will be OK.
- 2 Think about your design. You could feature Greg or another Wimpy Kid character, or draw one of your favourite scenes from the books. Sketch out in rough what you want to include and where before you complete your bookmark for real.
- 3 Draw or cut out. You can sketch your own drawings. Or photocopy some of your favourites from the book, cut them out and stick them on to the bookmark.
- 4 Personalise your bookmark. Write your name at the bottom, after 'This book belongs to'.
- 5 Add some decorations. Sprinkle some glitter around the bookmark or stick on a few small beads to make it colourful.
- 6 Leave to set. Wait until any glue or other sticky stuff you have used is dry.
- 7 Laminate. If you have one at school or home, use a laminate machine to seal your bookmark. Then cut around the edges, leaving about half a centimetre gap in between. Take care: laminators get hot, so ask someone to help.
- 8 Make a hole. Using a holepunch, make a little hole in the bookmark where shown.
- 9 Thread. Feed some colourful ribbon, string or tassel through the hole and knot it.
- 10 Finished! Now enjoy your next Wimpy Kid book without ever losing your place!

Write Your Own Wimpy Kid Song

Greg's brother Rodrick thinks he is such a good musician that he starts his own band. But you can do much better than Löded Diper! Try writing your own song – either based on one of the stories in the Wimpy Kid books or about what you like about them in general. Or you could try writing from the point of view of Greg, singing about something that's happened to him on one of his adventures.

Use the space below to write a song with three verses or four lines each. It doesn't have to rhyme, but as you write, try to think of a tune that you could sing the words to. You could even try setting your words to music with a favourite instrument, or by getting someone to accompany you.

My School Year Resolutions

As Greg Heffley learns in the Wimpy Kid books, starting a new school year can be hard. So before you begin your next year, try setting yourself some targets. It's a good way to keep focused on the important things you want to achieve, and will be fun to look back on. Set your targets for school and home using these ten prompts!
